Timing

Contract management currently is a hot topic in many organizations, most companies know why contract management is important and also see the added value.... but the right timing, available resources and budget where the reasons for postponing the start.

Control and pro-active

The rationale behind the decision to implement contract management are still the same; full control over all agreements, no more automatic renewals, reduce risks, generate savings and a professional way of working.

Scope, flexibility and safety

Given the fact that contract management is handled by multiple persons in a company it is important that the selected contract management application is user friendly and flexible in use. This will create a higher level of user acceptance and more persons and departments will make use of the application. Everyone is able to control their own agreements and on top of that a total overview and a robust setup is possible.

What makes a contract management application successful?

Next to the no-brainers like; contract description, end date, cancel term, value, status etc. the application must be user friendly, flexible in use and at least have the following features; automatic email-alerts, document uploads, reporting tool, multilingual etc.
